This year has been one for the record books, but despite the challenges, our work and conservation of Indiana’s natural resources must continue. In the first quarter of the year, the Indiana Legislature convened for a short session. IASWCD continued to work hard to get districts in front of their legislators, and we provided two trainings to prepare our supervisors and staff for these legislative visits.

We also worked on the invasive species study committee resolution, working to get the invasive species topic in front of the Rural Caucus. With the onset of the pandemic, we were unsuccessful getting a study topic assigned, but will continue to raise awareness about invasives with our legislators.

This next session will be a budget session, and with looming budget cuts, we will need to protect CWI funding, and need Districts to reach out to their legislators and advocate for preserving our conservation funding. The IASWCD adapted with the need for social distancing, moving board meetings to a virtual format, and providing full online training content to member districts for the first time. In late Summer, IASWCD, along with the Indiana State Department of Agriculture, hosted three “Vir-Tuesday” online trainings for District Staff and Supervisors throughout the state with over 100 in attendance. IASWCD also held a four part October webinar series of technical topics for District staff and ICP partners, followed up by two legislative training webinars in December for District staff and supervisors. The silver lining of this pandemic may be that we have learned new ways to bring content to our membership that will outlast these trying times. This annual report will be posted on the IASWCD after the 2021 annual conference. Please contact the association with any questions.

The Indiana Association of Soil and Water Conservation Districts (IASWCD) operates at a state level, on behalf of the 92 Indiana Districts, to promote and enhance conservation. This is accomplished through legislative advocacy, public outreach, and supporting our member SWCDs in their local work.
